Vrushali is an Architectural and Urban Designer, who brings her eclectic background and design sensibilities to VMWP. Combining that with a varied design software expertise and code knowledge, she manages projects and teams working on master planning, feasibility studies, and area plan updates. She also mentors teams to create seamless transitions of early conceptual designs to entitlements and design development work in the firm using Revit/BIM tools.

Prior to joining VMWP, Vrushali has worked with cities, counties and other public agencies, and private sector developers on projects ranging from city/regional framework plans, master planned community designs, TOD, mixed-use and multifamily campus buildings, to pop-up placemaking in California, Oregon, Texas and India.

Being a collaborative multidisciplinary professional, and a strong advocate for equitable solutions, she can effectively navigate through interests and priorities of different stakeholders without compromising on what makes the place special. Apart from work, Vrushali is a digital painting enthusiast, a diagrammist, an Urban Sketcher, and loves dabbling into visual storytelling.
